

Accounting: Amy Garcia

Amy graduated with her master's in business administration with a concentration in accounting after earning her associates and bachelor's in accounting. She has over twenty-five years of accounting experience within private, public, government, and non-profit sectors. Concurrently, she was an Instructor of Accounting within the Technical College System of Georgia for over 18 years collectively. While teaching, Amy served as Chair of the Accounting Consortia, Department Chair for Business, and Program Coordinator for the Accounting Program while serving on several college committees.

Amy's career has provided vast exposure to the various sectors of accounting resulting in her ability to provide a full range of accounting practices, policy and procedure development, and business management solutions to clients and employers. Currently, Amy resides in New Port Richey, FL where she is an avid gardener and gamer and can often be found playing her beloved PS5. Amy is a mother and grandmother and lives with her partner Frank and their fur babies, Lily the Shih Tzu, and two cats: Blue and Luna. In her spare time, Amy creates and designs unique soaps made from vegetables, herbs, and fruits that she grows.
